I am a beginner and I am practicing using if and else statements. In the beginning of the code, I have two variables, the sName and sNumber, which are strings. I want to use the 'if' statements to check if they are equal, and if so, for them to display a different function. For example, if sName is John and sNumber is 123, then "Hi John, Good morning!" should be displayed. If not, they should just display "Hello."

However, this is what I get: While True: sName = input("Name: ") sNumber = input("Number: ") if sName == "John" and sNumber == "123": print("Hi John, Good morning!") else: print("Hello.") Here is what I want: While True: sName = input("Name: ") sNumber = input("Number: ") if sName == "John" and sNumber == "123": print("Hi John, Good morning!") else: print("Hello.") Thank you in advance. A: You need to use and to join your strings in the comparison. if sName == "John" and sNumber == "123": should be if sName == "John" and sNumber == "123": Build Log -----

Local police said the tragedy has rattled the local community, and like others across the country, people are searching for a way to cope. "It's obviously pretty shocking. Nobody ever wants to think about something like this happening in your community," said Tiffani Dubeau, a Grade 11 student at École Secondaire Catholique E.D. Howe. "I just can't imagine what the families are going through. It's hard to wrap your head around things like that, but you just think about what they're going through. It's just unbelievable." Sylvain Brouillette, a Grade 10 student at École Secondaire Haileybury, said he understands the school has "moved on, but it's still very painful for the kids and the staff who are so traumatized by this." "That's what I'm feeling. I feel for them, and I hope they can move on eventually," he said. Julie Vallieres, a Grade 8 student at the school, said the tragedy will undoubtedly have an impact on her. "They're definitely having problems sleeping and things like that," she said. "I'm not used to seeing these things happen at my school. I thought we were pretty safe here and I think we were." The attacker's motive remains unclear, but officials said Friday that many people had stopped to help the wounded after they heard gunfire. Police say the 30-year-old attacker, Alexandre Bissonnette, of the French-speaking suburb of St-Léonard 3e33713323
