Plex-Earth will automatically do the rest and will zoom AutoCAD drawing to your project area. By the way, that's it! I am trying to find a way to import the KMZ file (found here: plexearth.com/kb/how-to-kml) to Google Earth with no success. A: What you need to do is to open the KML file in Google Earth and right click on the image and select Save As Picture (Ctrl+S). Then you'll see a new window popup and ask for a name and location. You can call it whatever you like but in the location field add the path of where your KML file is saved. In this case "C:\Users\Administrator\AppData\Local\Google\E[ress\Maps\Roads]\fc5bc4d0d01d4c22b3d356cb4511f42b.kml". If you right click on the image you'll see the options for zooming and moving.

Perfusion CT in patients with acute cerebral ischaemia. Multidetector CT angiography (MDCTA) of the brain is generally accepted as the gold standard for the detection of cerebral aneurysms. The purpose of this study is to assess the value of perfusion CT in evaluating cerebral perfusion in patients with aneurysmal SAH, and to compare MDCTA and perfusion CT. Ten patients with acute SAH secondary to aneurysmal rupture underwent both standard MDCTA and perfusion CT with an arterial input function from a common femoral artery. Cerebral perfusion was quantified as the cerebral blood flow (CBF), cerebral blood volume (CBV), mean transit time (MTT), and time to peak (TTP). Additionally, the CBF and CBV measured by perfusion CT were compared with the mean CBF and mean CBV measured by local autoregression based arterial input function (AR-ASL), which had been previously validated by breathhold 3D gradient recalled echo (GRE) sequence. Of 10 patients studied, three had an aneurysm which was confirmed by angiography. Of these three, one was an intracavernous internal carotid artery aneurysm and one was an aneurysm of the left anterior choroidal artery. From the brain artery of the aneurysm, the CB
