In addition to that you will be able to use the software on your Windows PC to: While most of us just spent a few days celebrating Canada Day and being entertained by Justin Bieber or Rob Ford, some of our neighbors in the US showed their pride in this fabulous country in a different way. A group of 'Bald and Bearded Men' called 'Men Against Blondes' decided to have a 'tea party', two days before Canada Day. The group was started by a man from Washington called David Hogg and his mission statement is, "The purpose of Men Against Blondes is to restore a proper masculinity to our society. A masculinity based on strength, honor, chivalry, and common sense. A masculinity that protects and fights for what is right rather than attacking those who are different from us." So the next time you see the group holding their tea party, just remind yourself that Canada is indeed a wonderful place to call home. The 'Men Against Blondes' group was started on Facebook on Canada Day 2011, as a Facebook event, and according to their page, they have as of this writing, 191 participants. Men Against Blondes hosts their 'no non-nonsense' 'tea parties' (which, funny enough, is a euphemism for adult themed orgy) all over the US. The first one was held in Oregon, and one can guess that they probably have held others all across the US since then. One can only wonder, why would anyone want to get drunk, dress up in costumes and have sex with numerous 'Blondes', and why would one want to pretend to be a 'Bald and Bearded Man'? It is however important to note that the group is not a bunch of sexists. On the contrary, they have two active leaders on their Facebook page, and one of them is a woman. At the moment, the group is planning their second 'tea party', and it looks like that one will be held on July 29th in Washington. Here is what the flyer says: "
