Unspayed Or Spayed? The One Thing You Need To Know About Your Pet's Right To Choose In an earlier post, I wrote about why pets need a choice, and I've made no secret about why I believe pets should have a choice to be spayed or neutered. In fact, this is one of my favorite topics, because if there is one thing I have learned during the years of my practice, it is that spaying and neutering are not just "a thing," they are a RIGHT, and, when done responsibly, it is one of the most important things you can do for your pet. As you can see, the topic is a bit complex, and it's much easier to get an answer from a vet than it is from a breeder. If you're like most people, though, I doubt you'd want to get one's vet's advice on whether you should spay or neuter your pet. That
