PC Agent is a free monitoring tool designed to track all your activity on the target computer. The recording component of the program can log keystrokes (Unicode characters and various keyboard layouts are supported) and mouse clicks, also storing the text under the cursor. Also, it can remember data regarding user logins, including remote connections. If you are worried about security, the configuration window is password-protected to restrict user access. The information recorded can be uploaded to a FTP server, stored to a local archive or a shared network folder, but you can also configure it to send them to you via e-mail. Aside from this, it can monitor files, print and scan tasks, power state history and connected storage media. Periodically, it takes screen shots and captures images from active webcams, sending them to a dedicated folder for later viewing. Also, PC Agent can interact with the installed web browsers to log visited web pages and input form data or connect to e-mail clients to gather data on the received and sent messages. IM conversations are also recorded. The results can be viewed in a detailed list or organized in categories by clicking on the "Grouping" button. Files can be encrypted and sent to a FTP server, saved to a locally stored archive or a shared network folder. Last, but not least, PC Agent can be easily configured to collect information on the logged activity. Description: PC Agent is a free monitoring

What's New In?

PC Agent is a powerful, extremely flexible and reliable keylogger for Windows. This outstanding record-logger is based on a multi-threading design and can work in both GUI and console mode. sent to FTP servers, saved to your archive or even to any kind of share network folder. The data is encrypted, so that it is extremely safe from accidental deletion and security breaches. Its special keylogger components also make PC Agent an ideal tool for spying on others, with the possibility of watching e-mail conversations and conversations with instant messenger clients like Pidgin and Miranda IM. AppLocker Description: AppLocker is a program that allows you to establish rules that define which programs and files can be run, on which computers and by which users. AppLocker is much more than just a simple control panel for allowing or banning programs. It also comes with a set of built-in rules to prevent the use of dangerous programs and to stop users from running programs that can damage their system. When an application tries to run that is not allowed to run, AppLocker generates a notification dialog that allows you to examine the requested file or program and either run it or reject it. You may also specify in AppLocker rules when to block or allow programs to run, depending on their time of day, the time period they were run or the domain they came from. You can also set a fixed number of runs or hours before a program will no longer run. The main AppLocker window, with its comprehensive list of currently active rules and controls, is accessible from the computer's control panel, as well as from the Start menu and taskbar. You can also open the AppLocker program from any installed program. For a program that is blocked, AppLocker provides information about why it is forbidden to run. You can manually approve an application by clicking on the message. If you find the program to be dangerous, you can choose to permanently ban it. For a program that is blocked for a limited number of runs, you can choose to set the number of runs to be permanently limited. All of the options available through AppLocker are effective in blocking only a single program,
