indwelling
ventriculoperitoneal
shunts. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently approved indwelling ventriculoperitoneal (VP) shunts for use in pediatric patients. Manufacturers began presenting guidance for using these shunts to practicing pediatric neurosurgeons in 1995. This study was designed to determine whether the use of VP shunts in children is consistent with published medical and surgical guidelines. Patient data on demographics, indications, side effects, and complications of shunt management were collected from 7 pediatric neurosurgeons in 6 different regions. One hundred and four VP shunts were placed on 95 patients over 18 months.
