3. **Save the image on your computer in a format you can use later.** You'll want to save the image in a format that will be compatible with the software you use to design your website (or you may even save it to a CD or DVD to be used on a portable computer). You can save the image as a PNG, JPEG, GIF, or TIF. If you save the image in a format that's not compatible with the software you use to design the website, the image won't be editable in the design software. 4. **Close the image.** You don't want to save the image while it's still open if you ever plan on reopening it. Be sure that you save an image in a readable format, and name your image appropriately. Saving it in a file that's not already on your hard drive is important because you may not be able to load the image unless you copy it to your hard drive. If you need to open the image again and create a new file, you can copy the old file to your hard drive. See the next section for more details on saving an image. With Photoshop open, go to File⇒Save to save the file. Photoshop offers two options: Save As and Save for Web & Devices. If you're familiar with the Save As option, you already know how to use it. If you're saving to the web, choose the Save for Web & Devices option, as shown in Figure 1-5. Then choose the folder and filename you want. If you want to save the file to a CD or DVD for use on a portable device, choose the Save for Web & Devices option. FIGURE 1-5: Click Save to save an image.

Photoshop Elements for Linux can be downloaded here. There are many features in Photoshop: you can crop, resize, rotate, re-order and edit images, create new images with filters, simulate with smart filters, create animations, etc. The drawback is that there is a steep learning curve. You can use shortcuts and menus to perform tasks, but a mouse makes the difference. This article will show you shortcuts for the most common operations. To activate them, first click on the image to select it, then drag on the image where you want to apply the effect. You can also use the middle mouse button (or button) to apply the effect to the selected area. First, open your image in Photoshop Elements, and go to the Tools menu. Go to the Paths menu, and select the Convert Paths Into Outlines menu item. Then select either the Linear or the Polygonal option to convert the selected area into an outline. See the following screenshot: This is an outline because in this case, we want to select a shape. If you click once, the shape will be selected. Now, move to the Select menu and choose To Path. This will create a path where you can draw, round or fill. If you want to create a straight path, you can use the Line tool, as seen in the following screenshot: If you want to work only on a part of an image, first crop the image using the Crop tool. Then go to the Paths menu, and choose Cut Path to cut only the cropped part of your image. Photoshop Elements is also very useful for manipulating grids, such as grids for design or image composition. To create a new grid, go to the Canvas Tools and select the Grid menu, then select the Default Grid command. You can change the number of columns or rows by typing a number in the box. You can also change the alignment (horizontal or vertical) of the lines by clicking and dragging on the box. The following screenshot shows a simple grid: Now, click once somewhere on the image to select that area, and then type two numbers in the box for the height and width of the line. If you type anything but two numbers, the line size will be the size of the image. To add a new line, click on the box. The following screenshot shows a new row added. Now, you can draw 05a79cecff

Q: Использование изменяемых объектов в отрисовке Всем привет! У меня небольшая проблема с использованием изменяемых объектов в отрисовке. У меня есть переменная `public Rectangle rect;` которая я подсчитываю вручную и отправляю ее в отрисовку. Другие переменные тоже отправляются в отрисовку. Мне необходимо, чтобы эти четыре переменные в отрисовке заранее заполнялись с разными значениями. А потом я получаю данные через объект `rect`. Проблема в том, что все разные числа я получаю от др

Q: `get_notebooks()` method of Jupyterlab I am using jupyterlab and want to create a backup on my github account of the important parts of my notebook. I have successfully used the gitlab plugin, but the git plugin lacks in an option to store the files. So I use the github plugin, which will create a `archive.zip` of each file when I save a notebook locally, but I don't want to create a zip file for each notebook just to upload it, I just want to upload the files of a specific notebooks. So the `get_notebooks()` method can help me to get all the files with a specific name? Here is the method. `def get_notebooks(): try: for cell_name in range(nb_count): results = cell_name.get_cell_results() for res in results: return res.get_cell_nodes() except: return []` A: Jupyterlab doesn't include an easy way to get cell files from a notebook. You will have to run the notebook locally with the Jupyterlab command line interface and use the File I/O utilities to save them off. `$python nbconvert --to notebook --from notebook mynotebook.ipynb` See the docs here: The Media Lens Papers is a set of seventeen, long-term investigative studies.
