An 80-year-old woman with a history of multiple myeloma presented with hypoechoic splenic nodules located mainly in the subcapsular area. The lesion was detected when she was undergoing follow-up testing for multiple myeloma. Splenectomy was performed, and the histological diagnosis was metastasis of multiple myeloma. The patient was finally diagnosed as stage IIB multiple myeloma and died of respiratory failure six months after the operation. Metastasis of multiple myeloma to the spleen is very rare, but splenectomy should be considered even if there is no palpable spleen.
