EA Sports' FIFA team leads the way in the development of technology that blends the real and virtual worlds. Over time, EA Sports has been a leader in innovation in player simulation with the breakthrough of the Anai/Vargas Engine, which was developed specifically for FIFA 11 and allows for more nuanced movements of players and brings them to life in a more lifelike manner. FIFA World Cup 2014 has also introduced a number of other groundbreaking features and new gameplay systems, including player facial expressions for the first time, live streaming technology, expanded player ratings, and more. Artificial Intelligence Changes the Game In FIFA 19, players took on opponents on an even playing field with a number of new FIFA 19 hacks. In FIFA 22, EA Sports tackles player vs. player simulation head-on, delivering a more realistic opponent AI system that was specifically designed to tackle the shortcomings of FIFA 19. Features such as positioning, decision making, reaction speed, anticipation and decision making improve dramatically, resulting in an opponent AI system that remains unpredictable and reactive and feels far more authentic than FIFA 19's opponent AI. A more comprehensive AI improvement this year allows for more realistic one-on-one battles in FIFA 22. FIFA World Cup Featured While the biggest addition to the sport of soccer for FIFA 22 is the brand new "World Cup" mode, offering fans a truly immersive experience of the greatest sporting tournament in the world, the FIFA World Cup mode has also been revamped with new features such as the revamped Ball Control system, the new Real Player Motion technology, a revamped Goalkeeper system, the new Player Career, and many more. FIFA World Cup Mode All-new World Cup: Fans can dive into the action in the most realistic World Cup mode in the franchise's history.
