A steady flow of colorful crops and animals farm up the valleys of central Germany. But a harmful German Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE), and other dangers threaten to upset this idyllic scene. Welkauf The subject of this game is the Harvest Days, a holiday in Central Germany, a region between the North Sea and the Alps. In September, children make their way to their holiday paradise with their parents and grandparents. They go out to collect berries, honey, fish, orchids and carry them back to the special house on the top of the hill. Your character is a farmer, who also runs a vacation house for other children and their parents. The children bring the harvested goods to the children's house. Your character, who is a farmer, is pleased when he sees the various fruits and vegetables that his

write about my dream farm, that I have for the last 2 years and a half since I heard about urban farming on ChrisyRob's blog. That's great! And now, the photos: The 2nd photo is in the grass nursery, its in Rowan's field and his is in the area where I have a big area of soil I sowed vegetables in a ystem, called Roots Farm. I have now 3 plots, one for tomatoes, the middle one for broccoli, peppers, cucumbers, carrots, herbs and cabbage and in the last one I sowed a big tree, a victory willow with berries and some seeds, which I hope to go into flower 1-2 yers from now. The 3rd photo is a bit more interesting, in the area I have a small shed where I can keep tools, a small car that's used to go from the shed to my greenhouse and a wood burner. In the green house I keep boxes with my seedlings and when the seedlings grow I bring them into the greenhouse. I do the hard work in the greenhouse and it gets a bit cold if the sun is shiney. In between I have a sunny-area with herbs, chives, basil, cilantro and a few tomatoes. And in the last area I have sunflowers, tulips, a squash vine and a vine that goes up the wall in the greenhouse. There you can buy butter, canning jars, spices and you get a glass door from the house with plants growing outside. So when there is a bit cold in winter I come back in the heated greenhouse to do little jobs. In the winter the temperature in the greenhouse is 7-7.5 centigrade and when its around 10 centigrade outside, so you already have a greenhouse. All my plants are from seed or from bulbs. I don't have anything from a garden center. Everything from seed or bulbs - that's my dream-farm. It came out of my dream and with some research
