A good Photoshop tutorial can help you learn the basics of the program, but in Chapter 21 you can find a plethora of great tutorials available on the Web and elsewhere. Photoshop provides many tools for manipulating images. Table 11-1 lists the tools that you commonly find on Photoshop's menus. Your mouse cursor automatically becomes a horizon line. If you click on the main guide points, you create a border around the image. To change the position of the grid, you click and hold the cursor and move it by dragging. Figure 11-3. You can use the horizon line tool to draw guide lines that make it easy to position objects in a photo. Photoshop's horizon line tool can easily be used to make it easier to place images in a dark-room setup.

Color Correcting with the Levels Adjustment Layers

You can make adjustments to the overall color balance of your images with Photoshop's Levels adjustment layer. Levels does a good job at adjusting highlights, midtones, and shadows but at the same time introduces color shifts and artifacts when it makes changes. Fortunately, Photoshop has a few other tools that help you edit and fix the areas it considers artifacts. This filter section of the Levels dialog box has

The same program can be used to create a professional high-resolution image in the format of CD, DVD or blu-ray. It is a great way to transfer your images, as it preserves the original file, including the original resolution. Unlike Photoshop, Photoshop Elements does not have a photo mode, it only has a direct editing mode. This makes the work process much simpler, faster, and, of course, easier to learn. In this tutorial, we will walk through the entire process of creating a high-quality photo. We will use the following images:

One of the first things you need to do is create a new Photoshop or Photoshop Elements project by using one of the following methods: File > New Custom menu > Create new Choosing an open file Selecting Edit > New You need to give the new image the dimensions you want to use in your project. Choose 300 dpi and 50% of the original image size, which is 30x40. In this tutorial, we will use 30x40, but the final image dimensions are up to you. Click OK when the new project is open.

Step 2 In the new document, choose Photoshop Elements as the program that you want to use. If you choose Photoshop, the open file will be the program, but the image will be imported and not opened as a new file. Click OK when the new project is open. Step 3 In Photoshop or Photoshop Elements, find an image that you want to make into a high-resolution file. Open this image in the new document and choose Photoshop or Photoshop Elements as the program that you want to use. Click OK when the new project is open. Step 4 You will notice that there are two tabs, on the left side is the main tab and on the right side is the Library. The Library tab should be white. Click the Library tab in the new document and choose Open. Browse for an image that you want to use for the project. Click Open in the top right corner. Step 5 All open files are stored in the Library. If you can't find the image you need, try to use another image to open the same. Click Open in the top right corner. Step 6 After opening an image, the Library tab will fill up with all the information about the image, along with the 05a79cecff

Q: How do I display a user's choices on a given page? I have a module that displays a set of images on every page. I also have an "Edit" link that brings the user to a page where they can see/edit the image for that particular page. How do I display each user's current image choices on that page? Pseudo-code:

user_choices = ['img1', 'img2', 'img3'] if user == id:
user_choices = [('img1', ""), ('img2', ""), ('img3', "")]

A: I think that what you are asking for is the "wizard" type module. After digging a little bit I found this article and a few modules that seem to be active: The Center on Media, Data, and Social Networking's Mission The Center on Media, Data, and Social Networking (CMDASN) advances academic inquiry by promoting interdisciplinary and inter-institutional collaboration on the governance and implications of the massive growth and use of digital media and social networks. The center, established in 2010, reflects a new direction of social science scholarship, one that focuses on the social aspects of media technologies and applications, particularly as embodied in the online world of social networking, blogs, and mobile devices. The Center is based at the Ohio State University and is supported by a gift from the Howard T

Q: React.js : default export const I don't understand how does it work. If I do : export default React.createClass({ ... }); the compiler will tell me : An export from ./__generated__/react-components/ItemRow.js should be added to/src/index.js:3 But if I do : export const ItemRow = React.createClass({ ... }); the compiler won't complain. Why? A: The first export creates a default export, the second just creates a named export. When you create an import statement, it will use what it finds in the default export, if there is one, or the named export otherwise. You may have multiple default exports if you have more than one export: //file1.js export const Foo = "Foo"; export const Bar = "Bar"; export default Foo; export default Bar; //file2.js import Foo from "./file1.js"; import Bar from "./file1.js"; //should work too import { Foo, Bar } from "./file1.js"; When you do import ItemRow from "./src/index.js" it will use the export { ItemRow } from "./src/index.js" which is a default export. However, if there was no default export, it would complain that there is no export in./src/index.js.

Q: SQL Server - Drop Index multiple tables

If I have indexes on several tables in a database, for example

ALTER TABLE dbo.Table1 DROP INDEX IX_Table1_DateCol_ID

Is there a way to DROP the index as such, without going back to one-table at a time?

```
ALTER TABLE dbo.Table1, dbo.Table2 DROP INDEX IX_Table1_DateCol_ID

A:

I actually just ran into this issue. I found a workaround, which was to use the syntax:

ALTER TABLE dbo.Table1 DROP INDEX [t1].IX_Table1_DateCol_ID

If your index name has spaces in it, then I'd recommend this syntax, too.
