During The Avengers 3: Iron Man is observing the security videos in the Triskelion's operations center. And we are told that The footage is going to be released to the press so that every citizen in the world could see it. So, could the CIA have learnt about Loki's raid on New York from this footage? A: I think this is an excellent question. The only answer I can come up with is that it's possible, but it seems unlikely. For one thing, the footage shows Asgardians go raiding the Triskelion; whereas, it is well known (almost assuredly) that the new home of SHIELD is Shieldhaven, which is in the Canadian Arctic -- just like the Triskelion. But still. Also, it is clearly not a moment captured on the video taken from the operations center. But it is clearly in the (much smaller) security camera footage we see later. We also see something that could be a Hammer, Peter Quill's Hammer of Thor's hammer. He does not try to "hot-wire" it, but he grabs it at least once. This happens once during his ordeal in the Rags and once at Triskelion after Thanos shot him. I honestly think the most likely explanation is that it's a mistake by the operations staff to have sent the footage to SHIELD headquarters, but they overlooked that when they loaded it into their system. They probably thought it was footage of some obscure criminal or terrorist, and didn't realize how important it was. Indie power continues to blossom in Madison At The Cow Palace, the roll of the dice on Election Night 2012 brought about something predictable. U.S. Senator Ron Johnson, R-Wis., defeated Russ Feingold, D-Wis., by a three-point margin in the Wisconsin general election. But after hitting the button and making his last campaign-related phone call, Johnson can take solace in the fact that his victory was a clean one. In a final tally of absentee ballots, Johnson held a 28,901 vote lead over Feingold, a two-term U.

Bayou With the Pathfinder Bayou, one could envision a situation where a shrubbery has overgrown and overgrown the town. The legend that is told is that this shrubbery will never die; the only solution will be to cut it back. With that in mind, the players are tasked with introducing players in a way that will promote the GM better understanding of the characters and eventually the PCs. Where is the Pathfinder Bayou? The Pathfinder Bayou is in the southern region of Patagonia. The Pathfinder Bayou is currently inhabited by a group of mercenaries that are employed to protect the region from the region's own former bandits. During their time in Patagonia, the mercenaries figured a way to use what intelligence they gathered from raiding the countryside versus going to work for the region's government. Instead, they set themselves up in the foothills and a large range of hills that is roughly at the base of the large South American giant mountain range known as the Andes. With the Pathfinder Bayou and the mercenaries, some townspeople still live in the region. But the adventurers that come from the Pathfinder Bayou have their actions shaped by the locals as much as by the mercenaries and the mysterious men with the crumpled hats that they guard. The Beginnings of the Pathfinder Bayou. The locals living in the region are a fairly impoverished community. They have been in need of a community leader to take over the region's daily struggles. A man named Papenfort came into the region with a small packet of a granola like bar. Under his brand, Granola Papenfort Fruit and Energy bar, he produced pop tarts. In addition, he discovered and developed a means of combining two ingredients. Papenfort combined his own spices with the locally produced fruit in a way that had a way to become wildly popular. In addition, the mercenaries that had been defending the region taught the locals where to produce salt from the beaches. In exchange, they allowed the locals to freely trade salt back and forth in order to get access to more granola bars and pop tarts. This double deep cart was passed off as a single cart so that the locals could continue to trade with the mercenaries. Eventually, the locals and Papenfort saw a way of utilizing his Pop Tarts in order to collect fees from the merchants. Then, they created a city styled atop the local T-Rex statue, that was legally known as the
