Talisman Character - Martyr Features Key:

Strange artifacts and mysteries lie within the Daedric ruin of Meridian.

The Master has ever been a force of destruction and death, but now he is awakening again, altering reality in his quest for the dark arts.

A Grandmaster Lich can alter your spellcasting abilities and weaken you, even at a distance.

The blight does not kill the Luchoron mind at the moment of death.

Finds a gemstone that can heal only one person every 10 minutes.

Although expensive, the Narsil'ja'Talgûs can resurrect the dead.

The Meridian River is laced with a pink haze, that has a way of concealing the actual nature of things.

You can heal your allies using Touch of the Radiant Sun.

Detailed description

I thought the most frightening thing of all was not my failure as a protector and renegade, but the discovery of the White Nightmare. An old darkness was awake once again, in the ruin and I was the only hope that could defeat it. If the Moon had died, the nightmare would still have come. If she was gone, then death was no barrier to the Master's ambitions. My poor, pathetic journey would be for naught, as my efforts would surely destroy myself. On my way back to the Silver Ward, I stopped for supplies. Luckily I knew a delightful bandit camp with a small outpost that was mostly empty. I made an offer for a quest and rummaging through my backpack, I chose some of the best equipment I had found so far for my new adventuring days. My character is dualistic by design, he is a combination of erratic and careful. This reflects his struggle against himself, his wickedness and his lack of control. Attain the rank of Grandmaster of the House of Sargoth will give me the unending power to fight the forces of terror. Also included is a quest that will tell your story. Below you will find the rest of my items and plot. I do not plan to capture your whole character as it is a wild and free world and in the end you will have to make your own destiny, but understand, that when you complete this quest you will be a unique and worthy champion of the Daed

What's new:

Athas "I wish to send all of you to meet Him!" I whispered as I looked down at my hand and saw a dark purple mark come over it. A drop of blood appeared on the edge, as if someone had taken my blood and dipped a quill in it. There was a lonely tone in my voice. The more I thought of it, the harder it became to bear. I don't know where it came from, whether it was previously memorized or simply discovered within my mind. I myself had no idea. "This is why I am going as well, to protect them and give them a reason to believe. If they learn the hard way, that's fine. But this is what I'd rather give them." After the bell above my head rang, but before the resounding of the bells started, I felt it. Small quiet vibrations. Faintly. A soft rasping feeling. They gathered around me. They were ready. And I was ready as well. As we made our way to His Mansion, the sun blinded us as we walked down the narrow dusty roads, blinding shields and swords in the hands of my guardians. The journey was a long one. We walked at a disciplined pace, we made sure of it. I think this journey was what I needed to keep my mind in order. How many more people could I take if I didn't have my mind in order? As we had walked for two-and-a-half hours, I found out we were nearing the destination. Torches were placed above all the houses leading us to the Mansion. It was night and we would arrive just in time for the festival. People's voices and laughing could already be heard. I imagined the myriad of people, the people here would be ready. Finally the festival began. We started the grand procession through the narrow streets that were surrounding the mansion. People played music that was slowly getting louder by the second. Flowers were on the ground and some so much that they were nearly covering the ground. They also had carriages adorned with elaborate cloths with their names on it. What I saw was extraordinary. I realized it was a tradition, a custom that I myself was glad to witness. As time went by, I felt the heat of the sunlight. It reminded me of how hot the sun is when you're in the south. I felt like this was one of the
