Professor Leowald is a flamboyant rogue wizard with a snarky attitude. He has been hired by the government to lead a team of men to Dr. Aldous's lab in rural Japan to retrieve stolen radiation crystals. While a government contract might sound boring, Leowald is determined to push the party to its limits to get the job done. This means more ale for the high strung pixie, the promise of sweet Rolexes if they all survive, the destruction of said watches if they don't, and maybe some revenge on the bad guys. About Felix: Felix is an adventurer who is just trying to earn a living. He's got an odd way of doing it though: he makes a living by selling his skill at minigames. Reusable. Minigames aside, Felix is a bit of a free spirit. He's got a knack for not taking orders, which makes him a pain in the ass to work for. His love of food and drink makes him both a food taster and a food provider. He's an idealistic rogue, something you don't find often in a game. Houston To Work On Injured Harvey Evacuees Housing Solutions In case the field of rubble is not enough for you, Houston is encouraging more residents to break down and take matters into their own hands. The transportation department is working on housing solutions in order to house some of the more than 350,000 people displaced by Harvey. In a statement, officials said "Many families are in shelters; others are living in hotels or with family and friends. We want to make sure everyone has a safe place to stay. Houston will be opening six new shelters over the next week and we are encouraging people to think about how they will be housed, who can help them get there, how they can adjust to an unfamiliar place, and how they'll be protected." If you're in need of housing, the Transportation Department will hand out vouchers to cover shelter costs. If you have a friend or family member in the shelter system, another voucher will be issued to cover their portion of the costs. If you have a friend who has a home you're interested in, and live in the Houston area, they can offer to share their home with you, in exchange for providing meals and some transportation costs. In order to qualify for the voucher, you must have a place to stay and you must be unable to go back into your

: History to Graph or Is It the Other Way Around? 2013| ByLoraine Mathis, Director Hometown Licking County, Ohio Education Licensed Practical Nurse, LPN2, 2000; Registered Nurse, RNO2, 2004 Brenton, writer, film director, public speaker, and scholar of the interaction between history and nostalgia, says, "One day I drove home with a shitload of DVDs and over three hundred books from the library. If you count how many of those 203 have been played, that's a hell of a lot of history I'd be hauling home. I took the books home to the house my father had bought in his twenties. I'd sit on our living room couch and watch two or three movies as I read. At first, there was a lot of questioning. I was a bit scared of what I might find. In my life, I'd spent so much time looking back." Brenton says that's exactly the next step. She read both history and literature as she went into nursing school. After graduation, the transition was a nightmare, he says. "I was terrified about giving up the escape that school had been." At first he felt lost. Looking for vocational guidance that matched his confidence in a career change. "It was high school for me and I was turned off," he concludes. "My parents' generation didn't see a big leap in going from high school to college. My folks went to high school and then got married. My father quit school in the eighth grade. He was assistant manager at a grocery store. He served in the Korean War, in France. He was a good kid but wasn't sure what else was possible with him. The shift in thinking created tension in my house." But Brenton stuck with it. She was impressed with the coincidences that jump off the page in history. "You'd think Shakespeare was writing about something that had happened in my lifetime." But Brenton wanted to go beyond the classics. She wanted to understand how history could affect society today. "I'm only starting to understand the impact of history on artists. The work they produce, I'd like to look at what that means." "History for the young is for

The coming-out party happened on our way home from shopping, when I drew back the car door to get in, and instead of to my right, I opened to an obvious figure to my left, staring at me from beneath the shower curtain, catching the pouring rain in her eyes, smiling faintly as a joke. I was just standing there, staring, standing some distance away, wondering how to react, when she reached past the curtain and made like she'd just left, somehow managing to step around me like I was made of rubber, bathing suits and all. DESCRIPTION (Applicant's abstract): Although the most commonly occurring mutation in inherited diseases, point mutations and polymorphisms producing disease states accounting for 10% of human genetic disorders have remained largely unexplored. In the past year, we have been able to clone multiple copies of different size alleles at the defective DHFR gene of a ddhfr/pdh* strain of S. pneumonia. We have developed a method of in situ amplification (ligation-mediated amplification, LMA), which offers an alternative methodology to PCR to amplify single copies of DHFR alleles. Analysis of LMA products shows differential ligase activity with respect to the size of the AI fragment produced as well as the presence of single point mutation. This would provide a basis for developing an assay to distinguish normal (single point mutations) from mutant (polymorphism and deletion). LMA products have been cloned into plasmids. Further, cloned products have been screened by Southern hybridization by analyzing oligo probes that hybridized to the cloned product as well as by PCR analysis of DHFR alleles from the same genomic DNA with primers in the vicinity of the probe. This provides an in situ assay for functional analysis of recombinant clones. Initial studies on point mutations do not show any obvious difference in the ligase activity of the wild-type and mutant alleles. However, the restriction profile of LMA products from mutant alleles suggest differences in methylation-sensitive enzymes. Two biochemical approaches are being used to identify enzymes involved in selective alteration of a subset of
