BNSF Railway's SD70MAC Executive Series of locomotives were the first all-electric locomotives operated by a major Class I railroad. Introduced in 1996, SD70MACs were the first fully driverless locomotives operated by a U.S. Class I railroad, and the first of its kind in the world. As was their primary application, SD70MACs provided a safe, cost-effective way to operate freight trains on short-line and secondary lines. BNSF Railway provides benefits and rewards to eligible employees and retirees, and provides opportunities to learn and advance through various career opportunities. We are an equal opportunity employer. This model has been created by fine modeler & sculptor Peter Petrikovsky. It includes new content and has been generously provided by the artist. All our products are crafted in high-quality injection-moulded polyresin and finished in an easy-care, durable clear-coating.

Q: How to run parallell tasks of List using 'ScheduledExecutorService' in Java I am trying to execute several tasks in parallel using ScheduledExecutorService but it throws a NullPointerException since I am passing the list. How can I run each of the task from list simultaneously? List mTasks = new ArrayList(); for (String file : allFiles) { boolean success = mScheduledExecutorService.schedule(new TaskWrapper(file), 0, TimeUnit.SECONDS); mTasks.add(new TaskWrapper(file)); } where class TaskWrapper is as below public class TaskWrapper implements Runnable { public TaskWrapper(String file) { } @Override public void run() { String mFile = ""; ...do something with mFile... } } A: I would propose to use Threads, which are more adequate for parallel tasks. However, if you decide to use ScheduledExecutorService you could do the following: for (String file : allFiles) { ScheduledExecutorService scheduler

The rise of the living-dead! The most powerful machines come with the unwanted side-effect of being immortal... and they've already been out for centuries. With time, humans have invented new and more complex machines; this new age spawned the beginning of mankind's greatest achievements like power, pleasure, and total war. In this digital day and age, technology was set free from the stranglehold of man. Newly-created machines could run anywhere, anytime, and with this freedom, they gained unstoppable strength. The first line of machines, the first smart, powerful, and seemingly unstoppable predators, came right out of the dead. An endless horde of deathgods descended upon the crumbling ruins of human civilisation and at their beck and call - the demons who feed off the blood of mortals. And then the war erupted. Humans fought back and, in some cases, won, but the machines were too powerful. The final military coup d'etat played out at the end of the game and no one was spared. Nothing, not even the gods who have been ruling over the world for the last 4,000 years - stopped until now. 'You are a corpse,' the ending quotes from the old movies, 'we are the living.' And then, suddenly, it all stops. The great machines have been neutered. The game is over, the war is over, the future is over. The once-great and unstoppable army has been reduced to a lot of nothing, a lot of monkeys. Of course, that's a lie, because now the machines are still here. They've been biding their time and they've got a new plan. They've got a new army. And when it's all over, when the last threat has been eliminated, they're coming back. To take over the world again. Remember the time when the street was a pedestrian-only zone. Everyone, with few exceptions, had to put their feet on the pavement when walking in the street. The first exception were the firemen, but we'll come to that. Back then, cars were smaller and street design was simply not so complex. You could have a few shops on one side of the street and just a few homes on the other side. There was also the protection of the electric poles. But as car design evolved, so did street design. Need to Watch You! Puzzle Game Genre: Art Games ReviewsA much more mature and light-hearted take on the tower-defence genre, this game tells a tale of an eccentric balloonist who finds himself caught up in events that are not all that they seem to be. Gifted skills that are unusual for a person of his kind make him an invaluable help in a fight against baddies that are the bane of the entire civilised world. 1st October 2002, 12.29am AEST ReviewsAwesome game. It's a little short on story and some bugs but still a very fun game to play. It'll be a shame if another game is released before the sequel.Sveltner Game "Virtually Impossible" Gameplay: Need to Watch You! Puzzle Game Genre: Art Games ReviewsI've found the last two levels a bit annoying because the game does not let you out of level one until you beat the boss, but then when you beat the last stage then it gives you three lives to go. This is not the way it is meant to be at all. Just me missing something or what I've done wrong. 5th September 2002, 7.10pm AEST ReviewsYeah, I haven't played it long, but it's still pretty interesting and worth trying. Definitely worth checking out. Another brilliant adventure game. ReviewsOk, I think that it starts out a little fast, but by the second level it slows down somewhat and gets more interesting. I find it hard to get to the final level but I'm still having fun, and I think that you should try it! ReviewsI love the puzzles, especially the multiple difficulty factor..i guess that's a plus for the game..but i also find the whole thing too short.. 4th May 2002, 11.19pm AEST ReviewsI think that this game is a lot of fun. I must admit that the music and graphics aren't anything to be proud of, but the player doesn't notice because he's too focused on completing each level. ReviewsGood game, probably not the best but it's certainly entertaining. It is quite a challenge and you need to really stay focused to stay alive. Also the difficulty level is rather high. But I'd recommend this game. ReviewsThis is a fun puzzle game that is quite

What's new:

Disc 1 Heroine's Quest: Developer Appreciation Package Disc 1 is the initial release in the "Developer Appreciation Pack" series. Like the other DIPs, it contains audio files, such as voice acting, instrumentals, and sounds. Like the other DIPs, it also has nothing to do with the games mentioned on the cover. The packet's cover itself is almost completely unidentifiable, only serving as a small round rectangle with no writing on it. It appears to feature the same kind of image that appeared on the ExtremePaws Valetine's Touchy Pets! 1: 1 Appreciation Edition poster. The first disc (known as set #1) contains the audio files mentioned above. It is contained on a single disc by itself. After [hopefully] "correcting" the recording issues of the second disc (which caused problems on my Star Pop Resurrection... maybe I need a clearer computer or something) I was trying to restart the disc and was able to re-download the folder this way: 1) Unzip the disc contents into a new folder, "Heroine's Quest_Appreciation_Pack_Disc_1", using WinRAR. 2) Rename the folder and move it to the main installation folder. e.g.: C:\DS\Heroine's Quest\Heroine's Quest\Developers Appreciation \ Disc 1\ 3) Right-click the folder name and select "Send To" [or press F3]. The folder name that pops up should be something like: C:\DS\Heroine's Quest\Heroine's Quest\Developers Appreciation \ Disc 1\Modstuf, When the 'Copy' option on the send to screen opens, press the 'right' button and navigate to the folder. 4) Make a backup of this copy just to be safe. There is a chance that you may have lost data after unzipping and uninstalling the disc. 5) Unzip the CD-ROM contents of the "C:\Heroine's Quest\Heroine's Quest\Developers Appreciation" folder. This folder contains the unzipped version of the folders "ModStuff" and "Evil". The second disc (known as set #2) contains files related to the gameplay of the game, such as some screenshots, documentation files, and a Credits Directory. It is not contained on a second disc and doesn't feature

My game is inspired by a game called „Expedition - Oregon Trail“. There are three possible words to describe my game: A walkable and explorable procedurally generated random world, where you will be able to choose which path to take and a game about survival on a small, limited resource world. You will need to utilize the world's buildings to get by and use the items you collect to explore the world. Think about it this way: You will be exploring a world and have to use the items that are available to you on your current journey to explore the world further. This game has been in development for a while now and is almost complete now. Even though there are a couple of bugs and glitches to be fixed there is pretty much a fun game to play already. For those of you who already bought the game I can provide a bonus with another free item for those who bought before September 1st: The Survival Atlas - A perfect fit in your backpack! Don't have the Survival Atlas? If you haven't already bought it and you pre-ordered it from app-, you will receive a hint at 7:00am on September 1st telling you to install the Survival Atlas app. It is free in the app store. You can reach the game via my steam profile. For those of you who have already bought the game I can provide a bonus with another free item, but ONLY if you have pre-ordered it from app-. The Survival Atlas - A perfect fit in your backpack! Don't have the Survival Atlas? If you're a developer, it would also be great to give this game a rating. When you buy it from my store you will receive a bigger bonus with extra items I made for the game including: Starter Jet Pack - It will give you a starting boost in your journeys. Superior Excavator - One of the rarest items and you will need all of them. It will give you an instant power-
