MassMailer is a simple and straightforward tool designed to provide a method for sending one or more emails to multiple recipients from a large mailing list. It offers you the means to create lists or import premade ones, edit HTML content and configure SMTP. Straightforward interface Right off the bat, MassMailer won't confuse you with any complicated menus and such. The moment you run it, you are greeted with an empty main window and a couple of menus from where you can create a new campaign, import a mailing list, and publish the messages. Running a campaign brings out the HTML editor which is basically your all-in-one work environment. In a side menu you have quick access to options for code editing, content management and formatting, while the rest of it is for previewing the message itself. The only thing that might set you back a couple of minutes is managing SMTP or Simple Mail Transfer Protocol and that if you're not sure about the information you have to enter. A generous text editor It goes without saying that MassMailer comes with an integrated text editor that allows you to work on the emails before you send them. It's not special in any way but it does offer you everything you need to get the job done fast and easy. It comes with standard functions that you can use to align text, add indent, insert ordered lists, lines, tables, add images and hyperlinks and much more. On the other hand, if you're not a fan of creating emails yourself, the application allows you to insert HTML templates and wok on top of those. Easy to manage and setup All-in-all, MassMailer is a good app with decent features and a simple workflow but it does need a bit more work on the aesthetics and some functions because they tend to slow you down in some aspects.Read more […] Test your skills at Rotor.Net and earn lots of prizes! What's New In MassMailer?

Distributing paid ads for website owners is often the simplest way to increase website visitors, but it's never been a free process. These days, websites and blog owners want to generate as much traffic as possible to their websites, because extra traffic from different sources can help them improve the number of clicks their ads receive. This, however, has never been a free process – and as with any paid service, people often don't want to pay a set amount per click on their ads and use different methods to avoid doing so. There are of course many other factors to take into account when distributing ads for website owners, and to increase the number of clicks you receive as a website or blog owner, you need to follow a very careful process. Some people are really good at writing code, but there are lots who are not so good at it. Even though people aren't born knowing how to code, they can easily learn to program. All you need is the right training and knowledge and you can become a coder. The hardest part is simply knowing where to find resources that can help you build a solid programming foundation.
