Does anyone know how? Thank you. A: There are 2 issues here: one with keeping aspect-ratio and one with keeping width always 100%. For keeping aspect-ratio, you could use CSS3 media queries. But width 100% is always a concern for most browsers. It is no easy task for all browser to play 100% width video, some browsers even don't support it, that's why you need to use JS method to keep 100% width. The code for this could be like this:

var video = document.querySelector('video'); function resizeVideo() { video.width = video.offsetWidth; video.height = video.offsetHeight; } function init() { resizeVideo(); video.addEventListener('loadedmetadata', resizeVideo); video.addEventListener('progress', resizeVideo); video.addEventListener('timeupdate', resizeVideo);
video.addEventListener('seeking', resizeVideo); } e79caf774b

The histochemical characteristics of the dental primordia, as they develop during prenatal and postnatal periods, have been studied in the felidae. The particular interest of the present work has been the fine analysis of de novo developing teeth as an example of complex histogenesis in which the basic process is not limited to one single cell type. The acid phosphatase and nonspecific esterase patterns of the mesenchymal cells have been studied by means of light microscopy and their time distribution and spatial distribution have been described. The specific activity of the enamel matrix during tooth crown formation has been followed by an activity staining technique with a cationized colloidal dye.

Mucous substances in the developing teeth have been studied by means of periodic acid-thiocarbohydrazide-silver proteinate (PA-TCH-SP) procedure on methacrylate sections. The results of the present work indicate that the basic cells which induce the tooth histogenesis as well as the cells of the dental tissues are the mesenchyme and the epithelium. During the morphogenesis of the tooth primordia in the cat, the basic cells are the subjacent mesenchyme and the epithelium of the enamel organ which induce the dental mesenchyme and the epithelium of the enamel organ to transform into dental mesenchyme and epithelium. Zeyla Awada, Sri Lanka's deputy minister of tourism, has chosen this week for a review of the country's first draft tourism policy.
