You have more time to shop

Stuffing your fridge with the healthy food you want might take some time, but it won't take any time at all if you've got the stuff you need to feed a growing family. You've probably heard the saying: "A job well done is half done." And in certain situations, it definitely rings true. When it comes to feeding your kids, things move a little more slowly — one bite at a time. And as you know, there will be many bite-sized meals you'll be making — especially when it's time for lunch or dinner. We're talking about breakfasts, snacks, lunches and dinners you'll make every day. Then, there's a small, but helpful, rotation of lunches, snacks, breakfasts and dinners you'll make every other day. And then, there are some days when you may not want or be able to make a complete meal. Sure, you can get your hands on some pre-cooked meals that you can just pop in the microwave, but not only do they take a lot longer to make than the meals you'll make at home, they are also a lot more expensive to make and give your family less time to shop, prepare and eat. When you shop for the healthy foods you need to feed your growing family, time is just as important as nutrition. You won't want to spend time shopping if you can't spend your time preparing healthy meals and snacks. Most of the time, the amount of time you spend preparing your meals will be far longer than the actual time you'll spend sitting down to actually eat. In fact, if you calculated it over the course of a year, it might take a little over 30 hours per week to prepare healthy meals, plus 5 hours for any leftover food. That would be nearly 16 hours per day, five days a week. However, there are many ways to make those hours pay off in time savings and in value added for your family and you. The first thing to do is shop before
