for those of us who are not aware of this, and only know what it means is that some content creators and community members create custom content for the sims 4, which then is used by ea to make an article with that custom content. the authors of this article is of course getting a compensation for that. the issue is that users who don't want to contribute to the content they see on the internet can decide to not support the content creators they see on their social media pages, which can lead to a feeling of frustration and anger among the users as we don't know who is contributing the custom content we see on the internet. we are lucky that a huge modding and custom content community exist for the sims 4 to help the content creators out, but as we see it, when content creators or their organizations stop using patreon they immediately lose their income and are forced to go back to their regular job. you are free to copy, modify, publish, transmit, display, perform, reproduce, or create derivative works from the software and your content, in whole or in part, but only as long as it is done solely for non-commercial, non-profit purposes and is not otherwise in violation of this license. the sims 4 store digital services agreement. if you do not wish to be bound by the agreements, you should not access the the sims 4 store or use the software. you are expressly prohibited from copying, distributing, modifying, producing, transmitting, performing or perpetrating any component of the software without the express written permission of ea or its licensors. your right to use the software is in addition to any other rights you already have, which vary depending on the jurisdiction in which you reside. these terms are in addition to any other terms and/or conditions that may be part of the applicable ea service that you are using.

10. you acknowledge that ea.s obligation to provide game updates and patches to you is a continuing obligation and that you may have need to update to a future version of the game. you acknowledge that the providers may perform any update to the game in connection with providing game updates to you, but it will be ea.s sole responsibility to provide you with updates to the game. unless you are the parent of a child or teen who is still in their formative years and you can verify that they have no idea what the snapchat/snapchat stories/instagram/twitter/tumblr/reddit/flickr/instagram kinda thing is (and dont lie to me, your kid isnt irl, let alone online) then you are not a responsible parent. and dont even try to act all hurt because i called you out on that. even in parents comments, many dont see the problem with this. parents only are protecting their children from this because they are old enough to realize that it is a huge social problem that is harmful to many. how many kids are taken advantage of with this? thousands? millions? but youre old enough to realize that these are adult people, not kids and not your customers. so just because your child doesnt understand what shes doing doesnt mean shes too young to understand her actions. and thats an important thing for you to understand. so can you check to see if your fanart has snapchat/snapchat stories/instagram/twitter/tumblr/reddit/flickr/instagram kinda but not a sims related kind of thing? if not, then this is a good reason for you to nope it and say screw you, you cant upload a sims image to your patreon without permission and that doesnt mean that you have the right to take them from here and post them on the paywalled website like it is freely yours to do with as you please. this is a business, not a hobby! and if you think you can treat your customers like shit because youre gonna do some kind of shit to them, then you have bigger problems than your fanbase.
