7. support the hacker's ark developersthe aforementioned cfp aci was published in late december 2009, and i am now busy compiling a list of my favourite games using the aci, along with editors/acis that don't use the aci.
building from source is a lot of fun and gives you a full knowledge about how it works and what might be the cause of problems. even if you don't build from source, it's still fun to check and compare things with other builds of mame. once you have a running game, you can also hack the game and change things such as the control table, instrument volume and midi controls. this can be quite frustrating at times as some games are very hard to hack. for example, when we get the games, the songs of some songs are broken! also, some games don't have any songs and the songs the games do have are in an unknown format. other games can't be hacked due to limited ram. in some games, the real game is used as a cover art. for instance, when playing "ufo" the real cover art was replaced by a donkey's tail. when you close the emulator while a game is running, it will usually crash.

sometimes the only way to exit a game is to switch it off by holding d-pad4, which is the "exit" button for this game. when you start the game up again, it should automatically start where it last was. note that the "hot-key" you press for this has changed with mame 0.37b16. you can now save the game by holding down d-pad6 on the title screen. for some games, when you exit the game, the s-rst menu will appear and you have to start the game up again. this happens with games where your game settings are saved. you might want to save your game settings before playing, and this can be done from the system menu. note that on mame 0.37b16, this is disabled in the system menu for security reasons. also, when exiting mame 0.37b16, the hdd led will blink.

7. you now have to switch to xinput mode. use the following settings. (the default start settings are start1 for tap and start2 for xinput.) start1: x1 (or start2: x2)shift: 0 ( or 1)sensitivity: 10 ( or 5)fallback: 0 ( or 1)xinput refresh: 0 ( or 1) yup: 1 ( or 0) yin: 0 ( or 1) yout: 0 ( or 1) 4. configure mame to run the i-pac ultimate. there are many methods for doing this. the easiest way is to use winipac. however, because of its in-depth configuration options, and the fact that i know absolutely nothing about it, i preferred to create a shell script that runs mame like this:
/home/torque/runtimes/b16/b16.sh. the bin file in the scripts folder includes shell commands for running mame with the i-pac ultimate, but you will need to download the i-pac ultimate binaries (ipacpro.bin and ipaccluster.bin) from the downloads tab. in addition, you can download winipac binaries from the downloads tab. note that the first argument is the software you are running which will use the ipac ultimate. the second argument is the directory where the roms are located. it is desirable to place the program at a location where mame can find it, such as /home/user/bin on a target system. the third argument is the directory with the sample roms. once the i-pac ultimate has been configured, you can select a game and play it. the game will either start or it will be listed if it didn't already start. if it starts, click on the ok button on the i-pac utility, once the game has loaded successfully. the game will then automatically start. if the game does not start, it needs to be copied to the mame game directory. the directory where mame was installed is usually /mame/roms or /mame/roms/mame-0.37b16-r0. the sbs_roms subfolder will appear in the mame game directory, containing all of the roms for the game. 5ec8ef588b
