Colorimetric and fluorescent-based assays for viral influenza detection and monitoring of influenza vaccination. For the first time, this study presents a high throughput colorimetric and fluorescent-based assay systems to detect and monitor influenza virus in clinical samples. In the colorimetric assay, a novel dual functionality peroxidase (DPP) is used to identify the virus via the signal generated by the virus captured by the enzyme. In the fluorescence-based assay, the virus is detected by measuring the generation of multiple fluorescence signal units. The two assays were efficiently integrated into a single platform and were used to screen clinical samples. The results indicate that both colorimetric and fluorescence-based assays are rapid, sensitive and specific, and can easily be integrated into a multiplex diagnostic platform. Our data also support the potential application of these assays to monitor influenza virus vaccination in the clinic. Q: Look for date of birth in Azure AD and send email to change password I am writing a script in PowerShell which needs to look for the user's date of birth in Azure AD. If the date of birth is verified, then send a notification email to the user. Here's the Azure AD script: $userProfile = Get-AzureADUser -Filter 'displayName -eq $OU' $oldPD = $userProfile.FindFirstValue
