I have a confession to make in this review. I was quite hesitant to switch to iPad Pro as a primary device. While Apple's ecosystem is quite straightforward and user friendly and I am happy with the iPad and the Pencil, it never felt right to me. The iPad Pro just felt wrong. On the desktop I use a 24" monitor with a keyboard and mouse or a 27" version that supports external mice and a keyboard. Everything I can do from the desktop I can do from the laptop positioned in my bed. I feel no need for an iPad, as I transported most of my pictures and work documents on Dropbox. I've used the iPad Pro as a back up device while creating my reviews. I use it for general navigation and as a kind of screenshot tool, but it just doesn't feel right and I just can't make myself like it. I think that if there was a lightweight alternative, that worked as well as Microsoft's Surface Go, I'd absolutely buy one. There's definitely something I'm missing, and I am taking my time to figure it out. The iPad Pro is a very capable tool if you're willing to adapt to it. What the iPad Pro lacks in size, it makes up in versatility. The keyboard means that the iPad Pro becomes an all-in-one alternative to your laptop. Sure, you can position it like I do, and that's perfectly fine. I have a massive dependency on my massive behemoth of a ThinkPad laptop, and that's fine. However, you can also position it like I do and do a lot of other things. You can watch movies, play games, create documents and videos, all at the same time. Why should I still have two devices? Why can't I have one device instead? The iPad Pro is already saving the world .

What It Does: With the ability to drag and drop your shadows for the correct size, angle, and shape for your content, the Shadow tool is the easiest way to master your shadows and create the perfect blended look for your images. The current shadowing tool limits you to only drop shadows, but the ability to manipulate them into something totally new is growing. What It Does: The Clipping Mask option allows you to apply your effect to only the content inside your mask, creating the perfect

"clean up" for your image. While not as advanced as the Clipping Path option, it's still an effective way to use the masking tool to clean up any unwanted content. A new way to apply color to your web images is by using the Colorize option, which gives you the ability to change the color of your images without taking away from the entire image. This is a great way to change the text on a logo image to a completely different color. What It Does: The Pen tool allows you to create custom shapes, logos, or any other shape objects that you can then apply to layers in the document. Adobe provides some helpful tools for manipulating the shape object. What It Does: The Pen tool is an essential part of Photoshop. It allows you to quickly create and manipulate different shapes such as stars, jagged lines, and freehand lines. It's also able to easily alter the size and angle of the shape and even does a good job at creating logos with a single stroke. e3d0a04c9c
